Coward Easily Scores Victory Over Bomeisler

Junior Champion and Cordier Likely to Fight Way Into Final Round

By Jack Masters

Favorites ran true to form in the eight matches played in the third round of the national handicap squash tennis tournament in progress on the courts of the Yale Club yesterday afternoon. The breaking point, if there is to be one for the logical contenders, is due to come today when the back markers will be forced to the utmost to overcome liberal handicaps allotted to some of the stars of the game.

Thomas Coward, Yale Club, junior national champion will meet Livingston Platt, a team mate, in the upper half and Coward will be compelled to give ten points. The other two players in this section are W. A. Kimbel, Columbia, and P. M. Morrison, Harvard. In the lower half of the bracket A. J. Cordier, Yale, former national champion is conceding eleven points to Victor Crawford, of the Montclair, A. C., the others here being John Taylor, Princeton, and Don Baker, Yale.

Coward Favored to Win

Coward and Cordier, on form, should be the finalists, and if the pair emerge victorious this afternoon, Coward will undoubtedly be nominated the favorite for the annual trophy. The junior title holder played a very close game in defeating D. M. Bomeisler, Yale, when in spite of his severe handicap he won in straight games 15-12, 15-8. In the second game, which incidentally is as far as Coward has had to travel in the present tourney, the Yale youngster ran seventeen points while his opponent was gathering a lone tally. Coward was minus 4 and Bomeisler plus 3 when the former started the run which put him in the lead at 10-4. It was a simple task then for the junior champion to get the two points necessary to win, while Bomeisler was registering another marker.

Many Yale Men Represented

The Yale Club is well represented in the closing rounds of the tournament, and yesterday's matches found eleven players pitted against each other in several matches. Livingston Platt easily disposed of Kenneth O'Brien in straight games, Cordier advanced at the expense of another Yale man, Otis Gurney, and as stated above, Coward's opponent was also from the Yale Club.
